Foundation

Monday, May 15, 2023, 16:00-19:00

- 16:00–17:30 Presentation of the workshop's aim.
Main characteristics of the neoliberal model since the 2000s and its influence on democracy.
- 17:30–17:45 Break
- 17:45–19:00 Neoliberalism and exclusionary populism: Exclusionary/right-wing populism as a consequence of neoliberal economic, social, and political characteristics. Why is exclusionary/right-wing populism perceived by significant sectors of society in many countries as a valid response to the crisis of neoliberalism? Does it challenge neoliberalism?

Tuesday, May 16, 2023, 16:00-19:00

- 16:00–17:15 Is inclusionary/left-wing populism a sustainable alternative for post-neoliberal societies? What are the main characteristics of the inclusionary/left-wing populist challenge to neoliberalism in Latin America, the US, and Europe? What are its main limitations?
- 17:15–17:30 Break
- 17:30–19:00 Which other feasible alternatives to both neoliberalism and exclusionary populism may be conceived, and what conditions must those alternatives meet in order to be politically and economically viable?
